The meetings I attended all addressed the important need to focus on Global Health issues. The CDC provided a in depth discussion on the numerous ways in which it works with research and development and supports other agencies in mitigating Global Health Threats. Each session introduced a challenge and it was followed by a way the CDC presents a solution.

The meetings also provided a unique insight into how congress can support the CDC in their efforts to target key Global Health goals that align with the Administration's priorities.

13. Briefly describe the stated mission of each sponsor and how the purpose of the trip relates to that mission.

... investment in tropical medicine/global health research. ASTMH is a non-profit 501c3. This trip aligns with the mission of ASTMH.

Established in 1972, Global Health Council (a 501c3) is the leading membership organization supporting and connecting advocates, implementers and stakeholders seeking to improve global health and wellbeing through informed investments and policies. This trip advances this mission.

PATH, a nonprofit 501c3 organization, is one of the largest global health NGOs in the world. PATH uses entrepreneurial insight, scientific and public health expertise, and partnerships with U.S. agencies and private sector partners to create products that save lives and help countries, primarily in Africa and Asia, to tackle their greatest health needs. Part of their work includes working with CDC to develop new vaccines, drugs, diagnostics and devices, while at the same time advocating for CDC's role in global health more broadly. GHTC, a coalition group of nearly 30 organizations with its secretariat housed within PATH, supports a policy education program about US leadership in global health research & development. The purpose of this trip is to educate Congressional staff about how CDC stops deadly and emerging infectious diseases, such as malaria and Ebola, using novel tools alongside U.S. leadership to get the job done.

This will be the first Congressional trip sponsored by GHC since its reforming.

PATH and GHTC served as a co-sponsor of a Congressional trip in 2016 to educate staffers about tuberculosis (TB) including multi-drug TB as well as research and development efforts to mitigate TB.

Through the IDSA Education and Research Foundation, IDSA has planned and executed six congressional staff trips to South Africa and Zambia in 2010 and 2013, Kenya in 2011, Tanzania in 2014, Mozambique in 2015, and CDC headquarters in Atlanta in 2017.

15. Briefly describe the educational activities performed by each sponsor (other than sponsoring congressional trips)

GHC, in coordination with the broader community, educates U.S. policymakers and federal agency staff on the importance of sound, strong global health policies and resources. Educational activities include the biennial publication of the global health briefing book and Congressional staff briefings:

As a 501c3, PATH has engaged in educational advocacy for over a decade. Activities include organizing Congressional education events, holding meetings, and providing background for Congressional staff on a variety of global health topics. GHTC works to educate policymakers and stakeholders about the impact and value of global health research and development. Educational activities include developing and sharing content about each US government agency's unique role supporting global health R&D, hosting staffing briefings and meetings to share examples of breakthrough technologies mitigating global health challenges and providing oral as well as written congressional testimony for relevant committees related to global health R&D.

IDSA educates policymakers, relevant federal agency staff and global health advocates about evidenced-based policies and programs related to global infectious diseases. Educational activities include congressional staff briefings, a widely-read news blog, and issue briefs on global ID.
